MAJORS: Spanish; Marketing

HOMETOWN: Falmouth, MA

PATH: Represented the Spanish program on the Dean's Advisory Council; presented her research on The Latino Impact on Marketing, Business, and Presidential Politics at annual Research and Engagement Day; recipient of the Modern Languages Department's Intellectual Entrepreneur Award; studied abroad in Salamanca, Spain; assisted Spanish-speaking members as an intern at AAA Northeast.

“Business is becoming global – from large corporations down to family companies – and employers know this. Knowledge of a second language is what will set you apart from the thousands of other seniors in college graduating with a business degree.”

INSPIRING FACULTY

Our Spanish faculty members are dedicated educators whose research ranges from second-language acquisition and applied linguistics to cultural and contemporary issues in countries where Spanish is spoken. These caring and supportive professors get to know you as an individual in our close-knit, student-centered community.

THE SPANISH FACULTY INCLUDES:

- A multilingual researcher examining second language acquisition, international business education, and biocultural theory.
- A board member of the Providence Latin American Film Festival, which features Bryant among its venues.
- A Spanish-language film expert and award-winning teaching innovator.

Working with the Spanish and Global Studies faculty on research projects helped me delve into my passion for poverty law and policy. They provided me with both the historical context of world problems and an understanding of the current domestic and global dynamics necessary to effectively approach these issues.
